

COURT OF PARDONS CONSIDERS A PLEA FOR W. KAUTERMAN

Asks Commutation of 15 to 30
Year Sentence Imposed
In Bucks County

BLAME COMPANIONSHIP

"Served Enough Time to Make Him Realize He Is Wrong"

(By International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 16—Members of the State Board of Pardons today had under consideration the application of Wilmer Kauterman for a commutation of his 15 to 30 year penitentiary sentence, imposed in Bucks county for robbery charges.

Pointing out that the robbery of October, 1932, in which Kauterman was accused of participating, was the result of the youth's association with "evil companions," Ralph C. Donohue, Philadelphia attorney, representing Kauterman, told the Board.

"The applicant has served enough time to make him realize he is wrong. He is not a hardened criminal and it is up to you to take the power of sending him back to society."

Chain Stores to Dispose of Surplus Canned Peaches

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16—More than forty companies operating 33,000 chain grocery stores in forty-eight states and the District of Columbia are united today in a nation-wide movement to dispose of the surplus pack of California canned peaches within the next month, at the request of The California Canning Peach Stabilization Committee.

Responding to an appeal from California peach growers to assist in stabilizing their industry, chain grocery stores of the country have joined to stage four "California Canned Peach Events" to focus housewives' attention on the food values of canned peaches. The dates for the peach sales are the weeks beginning April 13, April 27, May 11, and May 25.

This large-scale experiment in co-operative marketing of agricultural products through mass distribution is unique. It is the first time in history that the disposition of an entire crop surplus on a direct line producer-to-consumer basis has been attempted.

The idea originated with the growers, rather than the canners, when it became apparent that the demand for the 1936 peach crop would be affected seriously unless the 1935 pack were sold. But while the campaign was launched, primarily, to benefit the peach grower, it gives promise of being highly beneficial to other agricultural and business interests as well as the ultimate consumer.

MORRISVILLE COUNCIL SETS THE SAME TAX RATE

Restores 25% of Cut Made in Salaries Two Years Ago

ELECT YOUNG A MEMBER

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 16—Morrisville Common Council set the 1936 borough tax rate at 13½ mills, the same as last year at a meeting of that body held in the borough hall. There will be eight mills for general borough purposes, four mills for sinking fund and 1½ mills for fire protection.

Council also adopted a new salary ordinance at the meeting granting about 25 per cent restoration of the cut made two years ago to borough employees. The chief of police will receive $1500 a year while the other patrolman will receive $1290. Extra police will receive 50 cents an hour. The chief engineer at the water works will receive $1500 a year and the other men $1290. The borough secretary will receive $400 and the borough treasurer will receive $500 a year. The salary of the borough engineer will remain the same at $1800 a year.

Charles C. Young, who was a member of Council for eight years but retired two years ago was elected to succeed Elwood Kohl, who resigned. Both men are from the First Ward. Kohl ran for the office after Young's term expired and was elected and now Young is taking Kohl's place.

Council set clean-up weeks as follows: May 7 and 8 for the First and Third Wards and May 14 and 15 for the Second and Fourth Wards.

Treasurer Simons reported the receipt of $25 for another beer license in Morrisville. Council also voted an additional $15 toward the borough atlas project which is being compiled at Doylestown by the WPA.

Council also voted to make improvements to Island Park which was badly damaged by the flood. The grandstand will be moved back in place, a new back stop will be erected and the baseball diamond will be filled up.

A group of residents of the Island who suffered great losses by the floods attended the meeting and asked what if anything Common Council was going to do toward their rehabilitation. It was stated that a committee of Council and a committee from the Red Cross will meet soon to discuss the subject.

Mayor Thomas B. Stockham, who has been tireless in his efforts to help these people who have been in distress by co-operating with the Red Cross and as a member of the State Assembly has been endeavoring to get State and Federal aid not only to assist these people but to bring about improvements which will prevent a recurrence of the conditions which existed here some weeks ago.

Assembly Stockham reported that engineers of the Army have been here going over the ground with a view of doing something along the river front and possibly closing up the mouth of the creek. He also reported that the State is looking into the matter of raising North Delmor avenue between Palmer and Maple avenue so that this portion of the avenue will be out of the flood area.

Ever since the flood, Assemblyman Stockham has been working daily, endeavoring to have these families rehabilitated and to bring the improvements. He has had many meetings and conference both in Morrisville and elsewhere in the interest of this work. He has also been working with groups along the Delaware River, north of Morrisville is their efforts to get relief and to take steps to prevent a recurrence of the damage done by the last flood.

Personal taxes for 296 people, some who moved, some aged, others deceased and one under age were remitted. Council also voted to pay a number of the local firemen for pumping out cellars after the flood. Interest on bonds in the amount of $782.50 was ordered paid. The borough auditors were paid $220 for making up the 1935 audit.

The police department reported 12 arrests during the past month and $114.50 in fines.

STAGE SET FOR MYSTERY PLAY PRESENTATION

"Mystery at Midnight" Presents
Unusual and Interesting Plot

ON TWO EVENINGS

Tonight and Friday night, the First Baptist Church will be the scene of the fourth annual play to be given by the young people of that church. The play, which is entitled "Mystery at Midnight," is in the form of a mystery-comedy.

The plot of "Mystery at Midnight" is both unique and interesting, while many of the characters are most mirth-provoking.

The story: Rathburne Wentworth, a bachelor, is living in a large, old house, reputed to be haunted, not far from Chicago, Illinois. With him lives his widowed aunt who is insane. Six unexpected visitors stop at the haunted house when they lose their way in the raging blizzard. One young woman, Barbara Cory, is wearing an old-fashioned locket, and when it is noticed, pandemonium breaks loose. Mrs. Wentworth goes raving mad; Rathburne Wentworth tells her to leave his house at once; Alma Cory, her aunt, and Cloyd Parker, her fiancé, are worried about the locket for still another reason. Through the ensuing commotion, eerie voices, faces, and lights appear from nowhere, while four of the visitors disappear. However, a young lawyer, Dick Lawrence, takes the case in his hands, realizing he is falling in love with Barbara, and finally solves the mystery. Letty Flanders and Oscar Jansen, two visitors, and Emergence and Rasmus Washington, the colored help, will provoke laughter with their many ridiculous and ludicrous situations.

Rathburne Wentworth, owner of the house on the hill, is enacted by John Poulette, and Mrs. Wentworth, his aunt, is portrayed by Dora Thompson. Barbara Cory, an unexpected visitor, is characterized by Mildred Dyer; the role of Dick Lawrence is taken by Jackson Raur, Dorothy Swangler and Gilbert Lovett take the parts of Alma Cory, Barbara's aunt, and Cloyd Parker, her fiancé. Letty Flanders, a small-town flirt, and Oscar Jansen, "the strongest man in all the country," are enacted by Doris Hendricks and Warren Talbot. Laura Ellis plays the role of Emergence Violet Lily Washington, while Charles Thompson takes the part of Rasmus Washington, her "smaller-half."

The play will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, and tickets may be obtained from any member of the B. Y. P. U.

NATIONAL WORKER IS SPEAKER FOR W. C. T. U.

Miss May Macken Talks At Joint Meeting, Langhorne and Hulmeville Unions

HULMEVILLE PTA MEETS

HULMEVILLE, Apr. 16—A joint meeting of the Hulmeville and Langhorne Woman's Christian Temperance Unions took place at the residence of Mrs. Joseph O. Canby, Greenwood Farm, yesterday afternoon.

The speaker was Miss May Macken, national field worker of the W. C. T. U., her subject being "Citizenship." Miss Macken was introduced to the assemblage of women by Mrs. Canby, who is president of the Hulmeville union.

The topic was well presented, the speaker showing that she had knowledge of the facts on which she based her address at her finger-tips. Miss Macken is working also among the elementary and high school pupils of the country, and in the past two years has addressed over 300,000 students. A discussion followed the address.

The April business meeting of the Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association occurred last evening in the school house, Miss Ann MacCorkle opening the session, with Mrs. J. R. Worrall later being named president to succeed Mrs. Charles Gardner, resigned.

Miss Margaret Perry was named to arrange for the card party which the P. T. A. will sponsor at a date yet to be set. Refreshments committee for same includes Mrs. Edwin Lathrop and Mrs. Harriet Lefferts; and these two were also named as delegates to the Spring Assembly of the Bucks County Council, P. T. A., at Cornwells Heights, April 25th.

The attendance banner was awarded to the room supervised by Miss MacCorkle.

The entertainment for the evening, presented by the students, included: Recitation, A Robin, Audrey Lee Lathrop; Arbor Day, Nancy Lee Haas; How the Flowers Grow, song by first grade girls; Jack-in-the-Pulpit, June Thorpe; Robin and Chicken, song by the fourth grade; Pennsylvania's Trees and Flowers, George Moser; song, Trees, June Thorpe and Erda Smith; A Tree, recitations by Elwyn Hill, Harry Ferrell and Paul Genovesi; recitation, Margaret Norton; song, Birds' Return, Harriet Bunting, Anna Harrison, Shirley Potter.

Arthur Lippincott Weds Miss Mary Pasullo Here

A wedding was solemnized in St. Ann's Catholic Church yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when Miss Mary Pasullo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Pasullo, Lincoln avenue, became the bride of Arthur V. Lippincott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lippincott, 562 Linden street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Marcelino Romagnolo, and Miss Frances Tamburella, Dorrance street, played the wedding march.

Attending the couple was Miss Mary Palermo, Philadelphia, and William Manera, Mill street.

The bride was attractively gowned in white satin, fashioned on Princess lines with high neckline. With this was worn a lace jacket with inserts of satin. The long train fell in graceful folds from the waistline, and the long sleeves of lace to the elbow and satin to the wrist, were tight-fitting. The jacket also featured a high standing-collar in the back. The veil of tulle was cap shape. She wore white satin slippers and carried calla lilies.

The bridesmaid was attired in a gown of salmon tone moire, fashioned on close-fitting lines, the long skirt flaring at the bottom. The neckline was cut square in front and made with high standing collar in back. Her sleeves were short and puffed. The gown was trimmed with a girdle of violet tone tulle, and she wore a large straw hat, gloves and slippers to match; and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses.

Following the ceremony, the couple received friends and relatives at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott left last evening by motor for New York City where they will remain until Sunday. They will reside at 2010 Trenton avenue. The bride travelled in an ensemble of navy blue with accessories to match.

GIVES RULES FOR CARE OF TREES IN CITIES

Special Treatment Required
To Meet Lack of Forest
Conditions

ARE IMPORTANT HERE

The State Department of Forests and Waters today recommended a number of rules to be followed in the care of shade and ornamental trees. These rules will be particularly valuable to residents here, as many new shade trees have been set out during the past year, which should be given the very best of attention.

It is recommended that:

1. Keep the soil about the tree in a loose condition.
2. Keep the soil free of weeds and sod.
3. Regulate the water supply.

City trees need this special attention to thrive, the department points out, because the soil in the city frequently lacks plant food, and is usually packed too tight and is baked as a result of exposure. This induces the rainfall to run off quickly instead of penetrating the soil.

By keeping the soil loose the water supply is conserved. It also helps soil aeration and assists the introduction of fertilizer into the soil when necessary.

Ornamental trees, on lawns and streets do not thrive as they do in the forest because the forest soil is light, porous and rich. It is constantly fed by humus, the decay of leaves, vegetation, and organic matter that accumulates from year to year. The forest soil is also well aired and retains a required amount of moisture.

In the absence of forest conditions, most ornamentals suffer from malnutrition, in addition to lack of soil, air and moisture.

One of the most important treatments recommended by the Department of Forests and Waters for city trees is the covering of the soil around the trees with a supply of straw or leaves. This should be done in the fall and the cover should be left on until the early spring.

In the case of conifers, it has been found advisable to have a mulch the year around.

It is the healthy and well cared for trees that have the best chance of warding off attacks of insects and disease. Healthy trees are not immune from attacks but they are less liable to permanent injury.

PLAN TO SPEND $100,000 FOR CANAL REPAIRS

Thousands of Yards of Fill
Will Be Required For Repairs

PROGRESS ON HIGHWAY

RAUBSVILLE, Apr. 16—Announcement has been made by L. C. Conant, Bethlehem, corporate engineer of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company, that the company and the Delaware Division Canal Company are in the process of spending about $100,000 to repair flood damage to the canal between this place and Easton and west of Easton.

The canal between this place and Easton was washed out at four or five places by the raging waters of the double-header flood in the Delaware river.

It is necessary to build up the tow-path along most of the stretch. Walls must be rebuilt. The water carried in that stretch is fed through the power plant at Raubsville, operated by the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company. It will take six or eight weeks to complete repairs.

Mr. Conant said that between 50,000 and 65,000 yards of fill will be required in making the repairs. The total cost of the repairs to that section is estimated at from $40,000 to $50,000. The company has awarded contracts for this work to David Sutton, Riegelsville, and F. H. Clement and Company, Bethlehem. Rapid progress has already been made. Thousands of tons of fill have been placed on the washed out towpath.

The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company has also made speedy progress in repairing damage to the canal west of Easton, along the Lehigh. Within a week after the second flood some of the customers of the company were again receiving water. It will cost from $30,000 to $45,000 to repair damage to that section. Work on that stretch is being done by forces of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company.

State highway department forces, in spite of the rainy weather, have made excellent progress in repairs to the part of Route 611, between Coffeetown and Riegelsville. If it had not been for inclement weather, the shoulders would have been rebuilt and posted by this time. As it is, it is likely another week will be required to complete that job and the possibility is that one-way traffic may be lifted by next Saturday.

SPEAKER DISCUSSES SCHOOL FINANCES AT MEETING HERE

Dr. David H. Kurtzman Distinguishes Between Revenue and Non-Revenue Receipts

HUGE SCHOOL SUBSIDIES

Shows the Difference Between Methods of Raising
School Funds

Before a group of interested listeners, including a number of guests, Dr. David H. Kurtzman, of the Pennsylvania Economic Council, spoke last evening at the regular meeting of the Fathers' Association of the Bristol public schools on the subject "Financing Pennsylvania's Schools."

Dr. Kurtzman first distinguished between revenue and non-revenue receipts, the former including taxes, tuition received from other school districts, and state appropriations, while the latter consists principally of temporary and of bonded loans. For most school districts, the two largest revenue items are ordinary taxes and state appropriations. During 1934, for example, taxes constituted 74% of the total revenue receipts of the school districts of Pennsylvania, while the State appropriated 19%.

Since nearly three-fourths of the revenue receipts of school districts come through local taxation, it is clear that school administration is largely a local matter, and that the State appropriation is, or rather should be, an attempt to help those school districts that cannot afford to provide full educational opportunities for their children. In other words, the essential function and aim of the state appropriation should be to equalize educational opportunities for all school districts throughout Pennsylvania.

It is obvious, said Dr. Kurtzman, that the present system falls far short of reaching that goal. The difficulty is not in the amount appropriated as a whole by the State for school purposes. During the biennium 1933-1935, for example, Pennsylvania spent over 68 million dollars for school subsidies and teachers' retirement fund. This represented nearly one-third of all current disbursements from the State's general funds. The amount appropriated by the State, therefore, is not a negligible sum, but the most substantial single item in its budget, and

CTPID HITLER

Not content with regulating the political thought and actions of its citizens, the Nazi government is setting up a matrimonial bureau. It will publish lists of men and women still unmarried at the age of 25, giving their ancestry, appearance, disposition, earning capacity, etc., and endeavor to match up lonely couples for life.

We understand that for the present, at least, the decision to marry or not to marry will rest with the persons so advertised. Having made attractive mates available for all who presumably, have been unable to find them for themselves, the government will rest, hoping that marriage will follow as a matter of course.

This indicates greater discretion on the part of the Fuehrer than we expected. Willing as the German people are to accept a political dictator imposed on them from without, when it comes to fireside dictators they are, we believe, as proudly and fiercely addicted as any one to choosing their own.

To show men and women how to marry and then order them to do it would probably exceed the powers even of the All-Powerful. It might lead to the revolt and declaration of independence which Hitler no doubt fears and for which his enemies fervently hope.

"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." Hitler's enemies will have to resign themselves to the knowledge that he isn't yet quite mad. In the matter of forcing and controlling that sentiment to which a young man's fancy lightly turns in spring, he knows where to stop.

JUST CALL HIM UP

Maj. Noel Furlong, owner of Reynoldstown, winner of the Grand National steeplechase, received a telegram of congratulation from King Edward VIII. Naturally, Major Furlong wanted to conform strictly with rules of etiquette governing acknowledgement of royal congratulations. He wasn't sure of the exact procedure; so he decided to telephone St. James's Palace and ask a secretary or aide-de-camp or equey or somebody.

A pleasant voice answered the major, who plunged into his problem. Before he had finished propounding his query, he was interrupted by the pleasant voice which said:

"This is the king speaking. You don't need to do anything more. I accept your thanks."

So the subject was changed to the race itself, to Reynoldstown and to Jockey Walwyn, who rode that horse to victory.

This incident revealed that King Edward VIII. likes to answer his own telephone and has rather enjoyed occasionally surprising a grave minister of state who thought he was talking to a royal secretary.

That seems a simple way of solving problems like Major Furlong's. Hereafter, possibly, when some puzzled Briton or foreign notable asks: "How shall I acknowledge this message from His Majesty?" a volunteer Emily Post will answer, "Oh, just call him up at St. James's Palace and say 'Thanks.'"

All in all, the best a teacher of modern history can hope for is to keep an hour ahead of the class.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills. (Advertisement)

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XIV

Nat stepped from the house into the soft spring dusk, lighted by a cigarette and prepared for a short turn in the garden. He was dressed for dinner, and waiting for Tyler and Ruth. He heard the soft murmur of water, and advanced to where a fountain played, surrounded by stone benches.

On one of these, still warm from the afternoon sun, he sat and curiously surveyed the great house, ablaze now with lights. He picked out Gordon's room, and then his eyes dropped to the lighted window just below it. That would be the daughter's room, evidently.

Behind him a voice said: "Well, Mr. Detective! Looking the ground over?"

He turned quickly. Doris, in softly clinging yellow dinner-gown, a light chiffon wrap over her shoulders, was smiling at him from the edge of the fountain. He rose, smiling, flicked the cigarette from him and went toward her.

"Good evening," he said.

She held out her hand and he took it. It was firm and boyish.

"You are a detective, aren't you, Mr. Benson?" she asked.

Nat laughed and shook his head. "Nothing so romantic," he said.

"Just a commonplace 'confidential assistant'."

"Oh," she said, raising her eyebrows quizzically. "Then your—your employer is the detective?"

Nat discovered that he was still holding the firm hand. He dropped it and laughed again.

"Sorry," he said, "but you're wrong again. Mr. Tyler and your father are doing some work together; and I—well, I'm just a sort of appendage. I trot along where Mr. Tyler goes."

"Oh," she said. "I see." Then, frankly: "Well, I'm terribly glad you're here, anyhow. We don't seem to have many guests any more. And it's—well, it's inclined to be a bit dull. I expect you're going to be a popular young man. I—don't you think I ought to have some priority rights? After all, I saw you first!"

"Well, perhaps that can be arranged," he said, grinning.

She moved closer and looked into his face, seriously.

"Tell me," she said. "Really, honestly, why are you here?"

"But I've told you," he protested. "Nonsense," she said. "It must have something to do with that—that attempt on Dad's life last night."

Gratefully, Nat heard Tyler's voice, from the door of the cottage, calling out to him.

"Coming," he called back. Then he turned to Doris: "You'll excuse me? We shall meet at dinner, I hope."

The girl dropped her serious mien and smiled.

"Certainly," she said. "And prepare to sit at my right hand. I have already arranged that."

She laughed lightly, and was gone.

In the living-room they met for the first time the other women of the household—Carla, the darkly beautiful wife, and Helene, the slim and pretty daughter. Mrs. Gordon, very smart in a low-cut dark dinner gown, seemed only a few years older than the girls. Helene was perhaps a year younger than Doris, and very sweet in her filmy pink organdy frock.

Gordon introduced them to Doris as well, and seemed surprised when he learned that they had not met before. Doris explained the encounter on the road. Gordon frowned briefly, and then said rather sharply: "Doris, I'm afraid I'll have to ask you not to take your car out of the estate again, for the present."

Mrs. Gordon and both girls looked equally astonished. As if by way of explanation, Gordon concluded: "It's—well, it may be dangerous, just at this time."

An odd way, Nat thought, of reassuring the women of the household!

After dinner all returned to the living-room. Doris went to the radio and turned the dial until she obtained a dance program. Helene, smiling mischievously, held out her arms in invitation. When Doris turned expectantly, Nat and Helene were dancing.

David claimed Doris, and the others sat together, talking. When the tune stopped, they exchanged partners for the next dance. Doris' body was lithe and rhythmic in Nat's arms.

Presently a car entered the grounds, and in a moment there appeared a tall, white-haired man with ruddy cheeks, who was introduced as Dr. Samuel Grace, an old friend and the family physician. He had come for another look at Gordon's injured scalp.

The two men adjourned to Gordon's apartment for the examination. Ruth asked to be excused, bade everyone goodnight, and left under the escort of her father for the cottage.

Helene turned on the radio again, and Doris smiled an invitation to Nat. At the same time Carlotta rose, facing David and asked: "Aren't you going to dance with me, Dave?"

Helene shrugged good-naturedly, and watched the other couples.

Presently Gordon and Dr. Grace reappeared.

"This fellow's got a constitution of iron," said the physician. "We can take that bandage off in a day or two."

Nat was dancing with Carlotta, near the open French windows, when he heard the music of a violin from across the garden. He stiffened involuntarily, missed a step and stopped, listening, oblivious of the woman in his arms. She stared at him in surprise. He murmured an apology and continued the dance, trying to keep as near the windows as possible, straining for the sound of Ruth's violin above the dance-tune.

He heard it stop, then, suddenly. His impulse was to hurry to the cottage. But Tyler was there, and he knew it would look strange for him to dash away in the middle of a dance. Carlotta Gordon danced beautifully, but the dance seemed interminably long. Nat was searching his mind for an excuse to stop when Tyler reappeared, and the tune ended.

Nat darted a quick inquiring glance at Tyler, who gave an almost imperceptible nod of his head. Nat murmured his thanks to Mrs. Gordon, and started to join him. The dance music resumed, and Doris came toward him. Tyler's nod was more pronounced now.

"Work to do," Nat said to Doris. "It's been delightful. Thank you. And now, good night."

Silently, Nat and Tyler crossed the garden. There was a light in Ruth's window, but no sound now. Nat curbed his curiosity until they were inside the cottage. Then he blurted: "What happened?"

"It came again," Tyler said.

Nat's spine tingled.

"Glad you just left her for the night, when Ruth felt the compulsion to play," Tyler went on. "It was there—that hate. Nothing definite, nothing immediate. But that same steady, burning determination. Our killer will try again—that is certain."

In the translucent green water of the tiled swimming-pool Nat, floating lazily, watched the two slim girls as they went up the ladder to the diving-platform, their lightly tanned skin gleaming in the sun. They scuffled briefly, laughing, to see who would go first. Then Helene broke loose, ran out into the board, hit the end smartly with both feet and arched into the air in a swan dive. Her green-clad body left the water smoothly.

Doris, very trim in her snug-fitting yellow suit—her favorite and characteristic color—was already in the air, her body doubled into a jackknife. It entered the water cleanly, close by Helene. Then the two girls raced toward him, disappearing under the water, and in an instant Nat, spluttering and laughing, was being dragged down.

He wriggled free, ducked first one and then the other. At the edge of the pool Carlotta, looking smart and cool in a white sports frock, sat with Ruth on a ray-colored settee. The two girls and Nat climbed out of the pool near them, shaking themselves like terriers, while Carlotta and Ruth cried out in mock dismay.

Then all three flung themselves onto the warm white sand.

Hard to remember, Nat felt, that he was here not as a guest among gay, charming people, but on a grimly serious mission. Especially hard to remember, since nothing had happened to intrude that purpose into the idyllic pleasure of the daily routine since that first night, two weeks ago, when Ruth had again felt murder stirring in that unknown mind.

Since then she had played every night, without result. Was it possible that the Unknown had given up his plan? Or—alarming thought!—that there was some sinister barrier now separating the mind of the Unknown from Ruth? Perhaps they had overestimated Ruth's power! Could the assassin strike without Ruth's picking up his intention? All this Nat wondered, as he lay basking in the sun, half listening to the voices of the girls. Well, there was nothing to do but wait.

Meanwhile, this was a delightful interlude, perhaps the more keenly pleasant because it was an interlude, a lull between storms. Probably, he thought, it would be better for him if it ended soon. Perhaps it was becoming too pleasant.

He glanced up, across his tanned forehead, at Doris and Helene, now busily engaged in burying each other with sand. Each promptly hurled a handful at his head. He shook it, laughing, and relaxed again, face on his hands.

Flickering, he thought, to his youthful vanity to have two such girls spying good-naturedly for him, each with sand. Each promptly hurled a handful at his head. He shook it, laughing, and relaxed again, face on his hands.

LAMB AND ACCOMPANIMENTS

Several Valuable Suggestions From
Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree

Dear Friends in Bristol:

Spring is lamb time. Spring lamb we recognize as the piece de resistance of any festive meal. But what about the next day when the budget has been strained? And what about the many other parts of the lamb which your neighborhood butcher has to sell.

First, let's consider the various cuts of lamb. The leg, we all know and recognize as the choice cut but the shoulder of lamb actually has the best flavor and is juicy, tender and sweet. The breast and neck are economical cuts and can be made into stews, braised or stuffed and roasted.

Many persons object to the "woolly" taste of lamb. The heavier skin coating over the meat is known as the "fell" and should always be removed as it is tough and oily.

Cooking Time for Lamb

Lamb to be tasty should be well done. Roast a leg of lamb for fifteen minutes a pound; chops are broiled for eight to ten minutes to the pound; loins are roasted the same length of time as the chops and the shoulder is roasted for fifteen minutes to the pound.

Recipes for Inexpensive Cuts

Lamb Pot-Pie

Brown pieces of left-over lamb in fat and add finely cut onions in proportions to one half cup of onions to two cups of lamb. Add to the meat, one cup of celery; one cup of diced carrots and one cup of diced potatoes. Cover with water and cook until the vegetables are tender. Thicken the liquid with flour and season well. Pour into a well greased casserole and cover with a rich biscuit dough. Bake in a hot oven for about forty-five minutes or until well browned.

Lamb Croquettes

One and three-fourths cups cooked lamb from neck; two teaspoons fat; one teaspoon salt; one teaspoon onion salt; one teaspoon chopped onion and one tablespoon catsup.

Grind the lamb, mix with other ingredients, and moisten with a medium white sauce. Mold into cone-shaped croquettes. Roll in bread crumbs, egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Lamb in Bread Cases

Make a sauce of two tablespoons of flour; two tablespoons of shortening; and one cup of soup stock or milk. Stir in two cups of finely cut lamb cubes and serve hot in bread cases. To make bread cases—slice bread two inches thick. Cut with round cutter and scoop out inside, leaving in the bottom. Cut a top for each case. Dip case and top in milk and allow to dry slightly. Then dig in egg and milk mixture and fry in deep fat until a golden brown.

Curried Lamb with Rice

Three cups cooked lamb, diced; three tablespoons flour; four tablespoons fat; one well beaten egg; two cups milk; one teaspoon salt; one or two teaspoons curry powder.

Make a white sauce of flour, fat and milk. Add the curry powder. (Add one teaspoon, taste, then add the additional teaspoon if desired). Season well, add lamb and heat thoroughly. Just before serving add the well beaten egg, do not cook afterwards. Serve on a bed of hot rice and garnish with cubes of mint jelly.

Lamb Accompaniments

Mint Sauce

Four tablespoons finely chopped mint; two-thirds cup vinegar; one tablespoon powdered sugar.

Scald the sugar and vinegar together, pour over the mint, and chill before serving.

Year Round Salad

Two cups diced apples; two cups celery; one half cup toasted nut meats; two firm tomatoes; mayonnaise and lettuce.

Combine the apples, celery, nuts and tomato with mayonnaise to moisten well. Serve on a lettuce leaf and sprinkle nuts over all.

Tomato Fritters

Slice firm, unpeeled ripe or green tomatoes in half inch pieces crosswise. Dip in batter or egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a cube of bread in sixty counts. Serve as a garnish for lamb and top with parsley.

tribut by the number of teachers employed. The lower the assessed value per teacher, the larger will be the State appropriation.

The weaknesses of this method are obvious. In the first place, the State has no control over the assessment of real estate. Consequently, there is no uniformity of assessment whatever throughout the Commonwealth. Methods of assessment vary widely. In some districts real estate is purposely assessed for taxation at 50% of its true value, in others at 75% or 80% and in a few at 100% or more. Too frequently, both the assessment itself and its ratio to true value are little more than a guess. Consequently, by underassessing or by overestimating the ratio of assessed value to true value, a school district can very easily place itself in a group receiving a greater portion of state aid than a similar district whose assessment may be higher, though more honest and more accurate. Yet on this basis the State makes its appropriation to various school districts.

The second obvious weakness of this system lies in the fact that the State has no real control over the number of teachers employed. In other words, by employing one extra teacher, at a cost to the district of perhaps $1,000, a school district can so reduce its assessed value per teacher as to make it eligible for a much larger state appropriation than it would otherwise be entitled to. Dr. Kurtzman pointed out that in an exceptionally large number of districts the assessed valuation per teacher is kept just below the next higher bracket in the schedule of appropriations, by the districts adding an unnecessary expenditure of $1,000 for an extra teacher and thereby forcing the State, in return, to contribute five or six times as much.

What, asked Dr. Kurtzman, can be done to remedy the situation? First, he said, the State Legislature, through the Department of Education, must establish the minimum amount of education which it believes the State should guarantee every child, regardless of where he or she may live. The second step must be to see how much it will cost to establish and maintain this minimum standard. The third step must be to determine how much the local school districts can and ought to pay toward financing this program; and the fourth, how much the State should pay and how it should distribute its appropriations, so that there may be established in Pennsylvania a truly uniform system of schools of high educational standards. As an aid in financing, Dr. Kurtzman recommended elimination by merger of various adjacent school districts where the administrative work could be done more effectively by one school board than by two or three. There is no logical foundation for maintaining a separate school district to coincide with the political subdivision. As a means of determining how the State appropriations should be distributed, Dr. Kurtzman urged adoption of a minimum cost per pupil plan, the State making up what the local district was unable to raise.

For his thorough, complete and convincing discourse, Dr. Kurtzman was accorded a rising vote of thanks.

At the prior business meeting, the Association decided to hold a super-meeting in May in place of the regular meeting. The matter of arranging the details for this meeting was left in the hands of the committee of which Paul D. Brown is chairman.

The committee on nominations of officers for the coming year submitted nominations as follows: President, Paul V. Forster; vice-president, Warren Woodruff; recording secretary, Earl McEuen; financial secretary, Paul D. Brown; treasurer, George R. King; executive board, Walter Rosser, Edwin Hey, Harry Baurath, and Theodore Burns.

The Association also voted in favor of co-operating with the physicians of Bristol in making possible certain tuberculosis tests among the school children.

Now Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth Owners can Save $24.48 a Year!

(and big car owners can save even MORE)

Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth owners—you want economical transportation. That's why you bought the car you did. Now see for yourself how you can further reduce the operating cost of your automobile—and at the same time increase its efficiency!

All it takes is simple arithmetic to show that

Ford, Plymouth and Chevrolet owners can save at least $24.48 on gasoline alone per year!

Now that kind of money is worth saving. It will pay for two new tires. It will buy five pairs of shoes, a vacuum cleaner, or a radio. Or you can put away the savings every time you tank up with RICHFIELD HI-OCTANE!

HERE'S HOW YOU DO IT:

1. You drive the average Ford, Plymouth or Chevrolet a total of 8,500 miles during the year.
2. You pay just as much for other gasoline as you do for the New 1936 Richfield Hi-Octane, developed for modern motors.
3. Take 18c a gallon (including Tax) as the average price for gasoline during the past six months.
4. 10,391 motorists told us that they average 16.2 miles per gallon from other gasolines.
5. CERTIFIED TESTS prove that Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth motorists can average 21.9 miles per gallon from Richfield Hi-Octane Gasoline.

Bigger Cars—Bigger Savings!

If you drive a big car, the above figures only begin to indicate what you can save with Richfield! The very fact that you use more gas means that you can save more money. That's why fire departments, taxicab and trucking companies use Richfield Hi-Octane. It's the thrifty fuel that puts actual mileage on your speedometer and cash savings in your pocket!

Let Your
Speedometer tell the Story

Check your mileage with the gas you are now using. Then fill your tank with New 1936 Richfield and double-check. Let the cold, hard mileage figures prove that Richfield Hi-Octane is the gas that saves you money, mile after mile!

HERE'S WHY YOU SAVE WITH RICHFIELD

1. Richfield Hi-Octane contains more potential power per gallon.
2. It is especially developed for modern high-compression motors.
3. Richfield flashes faster—saves gasoline on every cold start.
4. No gasoline at its price has a higher octane (anti-knock) rating.
5. Richfield exceeds the highest U. S. Government specification for emergency fuel!

BENSALEM NINE WINS OVER LOWER MORELAND

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 16.—The Bensalem nine opened its home season with a shut-out victory over the Lower Moreland nine. Behind the three-hit pitching of Joe Cahill and the potent bat of Joe Wilke, aided by the errors of the opposing team, the Blue and Gray won easily by the score of 9 to 0.

Bensalem tallied three runs in the first on singles by Torpey, Spengler, Bound and Wilke mixed with an error. They added three more in the fourth on a double by Wilke, a walk to Crossley, singles by Cahill and Tomlinson, a fielder's choice and an error. They tallied two more in the fifth when McMahon singled, Wilke tripled and Cahill singled. They got their final run in the sixth inning on an error, a walk and two singles. Meanwhile Cahill handed out five goose eggs to the Lower Moreland nine. Their only threat was in the fifth with two men out, an error and a double, but men on second and third, but the next man popped easily to right field.

COX PINS KALMIKOFF IN MATCH AT ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., April 16.—Like Samson, Serge Kalmikoff, the Russian Bear, lost his great strength when his whiskers were clipped. At least, Joe Cox, Cleveland grappler, had little trouble in pinning the bulky Kalmikoff in two straight falls in the feature match at the Arena last night. A slim crowd witnessed the program.

Minus his scraggy beard and with his hair closely clipped, Kalmikoff showed little in the way of wrestling, but he did amuse the fans with his grunts, grimaces and gestures. The first fall occurred after 15 minutes and 40 seconds of tugging. Cox came bounding off the ropes with tremendous speed and flattened Kalmikoff with a shoulder charge. He then pounced on his foe and pressed his shoulders to the mat for the first fall.

Still storming and protesting, Kalmikoff attempted to make short work of the Cleveland grappler as the men entered the ring for the second fall. The giant Russian threw Cox across the ring a half dozen times before Joe clung to the ropes for safety. Then while Kalmikoff was attempting to dislodge him with mighty grunts and pulls, Cox suddenly released his hold on the ropes and the pair shot backward across the ring. When they landed Cox was sitting on top of his foe. A quick twist of Kalmikoff's leg by Cox caused the Russian's shoulders to rest on the canvas. The second fall had just lasted one minute and two seconds. Kalmikoff weighed 230, Cox 220.

What You Should Do WHEN FEET ITCH and BURN

When night comes and your feet itch and burn so they're almost killing you, do this—

Send to United Cut Rate Drug Store, Bristol and Langhorne, Pa., or any good druggist, and get a package of Radox—it's inexpensive—dissolve 3 tablespoonfuls in a gallon of hot water and soak your tender burning feet in this comforting bath for just 15 minutes.

Soon the burning and soreness will be gone and tomorrow your feet will feel fine and strong again.

Do this for just 3 nights in succession and hard coarse skin around heels and toes and on soles of feet will peel right off and walking will again become a pleasure.—(Advertisement.)

FOUR OF TEN BOUTS AT CROYDON ARENA END IN KNOCK-OUTS; CASTOR DEFEATS SALVATORE FERRINO, GERMANTOWN CLUB

CROYDON, Apr. 16.—Chester Castor, Bristol's sterling fly-weight, defeated Salvatore Ferrino, of the Germantown Boys' Club, in the wind-up of a slambang show held in the Arena, here, last night. Out of the 10 great bouts, four ended in knock-outs, thus sending the large crowd home early.

Castor, making his second appearance in the ring this week, carried entirely too much steam in his punches for the Germantown lad, who was on the receiving end of a barrage of rights and lefts throughout the three rounds, with the officials giving the Bristol youth the unanimous decision at the end.

Schmidt, a pleasing workman, slashed a hard right on the ever-bouncing Nocito, whenever he got the chance and stung the local youth plenty all during the three rounds, gaining the decision by a wide margin.

Jack Carter, the Daggart slasher, defeated John Welaz, of the Germantown Boys' Club in the 10-10 class. Carter ripped hard rights and lefts into the Germantown boy's stomach in the first round and had Welaz in a bad way for a while, but Carter became too eager and missed many punches in his effort to finish him.

In the second round Welaz came back strong and began landing some hefty wallops of his own, that had the fans up on their feet yelling for the Germantown boy to put his opponent away.

The third round was a repetition of the second with both boys standing toe-to-toe slugging one another all over the ring. After the bout the announcer, James Tygh, stated that Carter and Welaz would fight again next week.

Charlie Shea, a great youngster from the Northeast Shrine Club, knocked out Harry McCord in the second round in one of the most sensational fights seen here in a long time. McCord, a left-handed fighter, with dynamite in his fists, dashed out of his corner at the opening bell and swarmed all over Shea, backing him up against the ropes and pummeled the Northeast boy about the head. But McCord's supremacy was short-lived for Shea finally got the range of McCord's jaw and had him on the floor in no time.

Shea then proceeded to give McCord a terrific leathering and had him out cold when the bell rang. McCord's seconds dragged him to his corner, where he was quickly revived and ready for the second round, apparently in good shape. Shea started after him at the bell like a tiger and battered the Kensington boy all over the ring, sending him to the floor for keeps in one and a half seconds of the second round.

Another bout that had the crowd in a frenzy was between John Cubbins, Germantown Boys' Club, and Fred Aspero, of the Neighborhood Club. These two 140-pounders battered one another from post to post for three rounds with Cubbins getting the decision at the end.

Cubbins, a former district champion, had Aspero out on his feet in the second round but couldn't finish the job.

Results of CROYDON AMATEUR BOUTS

120 lb. class—Walter Rhoads, Kensington A. C., knocked out James Lefferts, Daggart A. C., in second round.

140 lb. class—Stanley Gadzinski, Daggart A. C., knocked out William McDevitt, Kensington, in first round.

118 lb. class—William Leighton, Croydon, won on points over Albert Hall, Kensington A. C., in three rounds.

163 lb. class—John Triebie, Neighborhood Club, lost on technical knock out in first round to Albert Rules, of Germantown Boys' Club.

142 lb. class—John Cubbins, Germantown Boys' Club defeated Fred Aspero, Neighborhood A. C., in three rounds.

140 lb. class—Thomas Francis, Germantown Boys' Club, won decision over John Acker, Daggart A. C., in three rounds.

140 lb. class—Charles Shea, Northeast Shrine Club, knocked out Harry McCord, Kensington, in second round.

124 lb. class—Carl Schmidt, Nativity C. C., defeated James Nocito, Croydon, on points.

162 lb. class—Jack Carter, Daggart A. C., won decision over John Welaz, Germantown Boys' Club in three rounds.

112 lb. class—Chester Castor, Bristol, was awarded judges' decision in three rounds over Salvatore Ferrino, of Germantown Boys' Club.

Aspero, one of the gamest boys ever to show here, rallied in the last round and won the round by a wide margin but the lead Cubbins had in the first two rounds won him the decision at the bell. The crowd gave both boys a wonderful ovation and yelled for a return match.

John Acker, of Daggart A. C., lost the decision to Thomas Francis, of Germantown, in three rounds, while Albert Rules, another Germantown lad, defeated John Triebie, Neighborhood Club. In the first round, Triebie received a nasty lump under his left eye and was unable to continue.

Stanley Gadzinski, Daggart A. C., knocked out William McDevitt, of Kensington, in the first round after a furious mix-up with a right smash to the body. Willie Leighton was lucky in winning the decision over Albert Hall, a shifty scrapper from Kensington in three rounds, while Walter Rhoads knocked out Jimmy Lefferts, of Daggart, in the second round of the opener.

The officials were: referee, Walter Harpt; judges, William Montgomery and Ford Lilly; time-keeper, Thomas D. Hanlon; announcer, James Tygh.

THEODORE R. GARDNER FOR CONGRESS

Two years ago, when the New Deal was at the height of its influence, Theodore R. Gardner of Lehigh County, was the unanimous choice of the outstanding Republicans of that County for the Republican nomination for Congress.

The fact he was a young man was regarded as one of his greatest assets, and the argument in this respect was, that our problems being what they are, coupled with the likelihood that several years will elapse before the Republicans can come into the control of the Senate, Mr. Gardner possessed a life expectancy which would enable him, by successive re-elections, to gain the knowledge, the experience and the prestige of continued service which would make him an invaluable asset to his party and his constituency alike.

Mr. Gardner campaigned in Bucks County, and these arguments, combined with his character and evident ability, so impressed the Republicans of Bucks County, that in the November Election of 1934 they gave him a substantial majority.

Mr. Gardner, a lawyer and United States Commissioner, born in Allentown, a graduate from Muhlenberg College and the University of Pennsylvania Law School, who served a two-year enlistment in the United States Navy, at the expiration of which he was honorably discharged, possesses the same qualifications today as he did two years ago, but strangely enough, he is being opposed for the Republican nomination at the approaching Primary by one who was foremost among those who prevailed upon him to make the canvass, two years ago and under far less promising circumstances.

Shall the man who was willing to carry the standard in 1934, be turned down now because others desire to step in when they see the assurance of Republican victory in this contest?

We ask your support of acknowledged ability, straightforward integrity and fair play, by marking your ballot for Theodore R. Gardner for Congress, at the Primary Election, Tuesday, April 28th.

NO MISTAKE—PEOPLE DO WANT Top-run

It's the same all over. Crab Orchard going great. Eight times more popular now than last year. People can taste the difference in this fine Kentucky straight bourbon made the top-run way—like the most expensive whiskies—by the old fashioned mash-tub process. Next time ask for this straight top-run bourbon by name.
